

The Little Captain's Big Dream

By אור שטרנשוס

For Or Shterenshus and Shiraz Shterenshus, the bravest explorers in the world! Once there was a boy named Pip. Pip had a very big smile and an even bigger straw hat. He lived by the Bubbly Blue Sea and dreamed of a grand adventure!

"I need a ship!" Pip cried. He searched the shore until he found a little wooden boat named the 'Sunny Snacker.' It was small, but it was sturdy, round, and ready to splash into the waves.

On a nearby island, Pip met Bram. Bram was very strong and carried a wooden practice sword. "Can I come too?" Bram asked with a brave look. Pip reached out his hand to welcome his new friend.

Bram was very brave, but he often got a little bit lost. He liked to walk in circles and look at the flowers until he found a nice, soft spot for a nap.

Then they met Nova. Nova was very smart and had a giant, colorful map that showed all the secrets of the sea. "I can show you the way to the Giggle Treasure!" Nova said, showing Pip the map.

Nova looked up at the twinkling stars and the fluffy clouds. She knew exactly which way the wind was blowing. "Follow me!" she cheered, pointing her finger toward the distant horizon.

The 'Sunny Snacker' sailed over the bouncy waves. Pip and Bram worked together to pull the heavy ropes and keep the boat moving fast toward their goal.

"Look!" cried Nova. "The Giggle Treasure!" In the middle of a tiny, sandy island sat a giant, glowing golden pineapple that smelled like honey and sunshine. Pip couldn't believe his eyes!

With full tummies and happy hearts, Pip and his friends sailed back home across the calm water. "Tomorrow," Pip whispered as he fell asleep, "we will find an even bigger snack."
